One day Duke Frederick commanded the two girls to attend a wrestling match between Charles, the royal wrestler, and a young man named Orlando. Orlando was the son of Sir Rowland de Boys, who in his lifetime had been one of the banished duke's most royal supporters. When Sir Rowland died, he wanted that his eldest son, Oliver, should look after his younger brother's education. But Oliver had neglected this task. The moment Rosalind saw Orlando she fell in love with him, and he with her. She tried to dissuade him from an unequal contest with Charles, so powerful a wrestler. But the more she pleaded, the more determined Orlando became, and ultimately defeated his antagonist, and was rewarded for his prowess with a chain from Rosalind's own neck.

Answer the following Questions:
