Explain b) Read the following essay and write a precis. (50-70 words) Stepping into a new institution as a fresher feels like opening a door to endless possibilities. Everything seems unfamiliar yet exciting—new faces, challenging subjects, and a campus waiting to be explored. The initial days are filled with nervousness and anticipation, navigating through corridors and trying to remember classroom locations. Making friends becomes the first priority, and soon, what began as awkward introductions transforms into lasting bonds. Late-night study sessions, canteen conversations, and group projects create memories that define the fresher year. Academic pressure builds gradually as assignments pile up and exams approach, teaching valuable lessons in time management and responsibility. The fresher learns to balance independence with accountability, experiencing freedom while managing responsibilities. There are moments of homesickness, failures, and self-doubt, but also triumphs, discoveries, and personal growth. This transitional phase shapes character, builds resilience, and lays the foundation for future success. The fresher year isn't just about education—it's about transformation.	5M 5M	4	3
